Writing

Some people believe that school holidays should be shorter so that students can spend more time learning. Others argue that long holidays are necessary for rest and personal development. In my opinion, long school holidays are important and shouldn't be reduced.

Firstly, students need enough time to rest both physically and mentally. During the school year, they face a lot of pressure from homework, exams. If holidays were shorter, many students would feel tired and stressed, which could actually reduce their motivation to study and learn. Well-rested students usually returned to school more focused and ready to study.

Secondly, long holidays give young people the opportunity to explore their interests outside the classroom. Some students learn new skills, such as playing musical instruments, learning languages or doing sports. Others travel, read books or spend more time with their families. These experiences help students grow as individuals and develop important life skills that are not usually taught at school.

Of course, learning is important, and schools should use time effectively. However, this ~~doesn't~~<sup>e</sup> mean that students must study all year round. A balance between education and rest is important.

In conclusion, while additional learning time may seem beneficial, long school holidays play a key role in students' well-being and personal development, so they should remain an important part of the school year.
