Hello! I am writing to tell you about a book ~~I have read~~ in ~~which~~ which the main character behaved in a surprising way. [It is called «45°F». One of the main characters there, Bitty, was one of the "firefighters", though not the ones who stop the fire, <sup>they</sup> ~~they~~ <sup>start</sup> ~~they~~ <sup>the new reality</sup> ~~the new reality~~ they start it. That was the future, <sup>the new reality</sup> ~~the new reality~~ ~~in~~ where <sup>old</sup> books were <sup>at least</sup> ~~at least~~ forbidden and, when someone got suspected of keeping ~~at least~~ one of them, firefighters burnt their house down along with ~~the~~ the books. Bitty, as the captain of ~~the team,~~ had ~~a~~ lots of responsibilities and was the one who did the ~~the~~ investigation work. Firefighters, just like the rest of citizens, were not allowed to read the books they destroyed. Despite that, Bitty often quoted some famous authors in conversations. He ~~explain~~ explained it as "professional deformation", claiming ~~the~~ that he unadventurously caught glimpses of ~~the~~ books' pages.

I ~~didn't~~ <sup>did not</sup> believe that excuse of his and ~~was~~ turned out to be right. In the last chapter the author explained Bitty's strange behaviour though the captain's ~~own~~ mouth in a "deleted scene". Long story short, as a little boy ~~the~~ he went through a row of traumatic experiences, which lead him from being a book-lover to a hater.

I ~~don't~~ <sup>do not</sup> want to spoil the reading for you, so I ~~won't~~ <sup>will not</sup> tell you more. Read the book, and you will find out everything yourself. Genuinely recommend!
