Writing Task 2

My experience with physics.

I had a horrible experience studying physics in my school, and it has to do with a variety of different reasons. Physics as a form of science can often be pretty difficult for me to comprehend, with the huge amounts of formulas it has. It gets worse when you turn it into a mandatory school subject, where I would be forced to take it all in and make sense of all that. My physics teacher did not help with that for the most part. She was often quite cold with our class, giving me and my classmates additional pressure, more than we already experienced on the regular basis. Many of them got low grades, and unfortunately I was not much different. I can feel awful getting bad grades at school as it makes me feel like my struggles and aspirations are being devalued this way. It can also heavily demotivate me to continue studying the subject since the result could be the same: painful failure, which will not only make me more and more frustrated, but will also make me regret even coming to class in the first place. I wish good luck to anyone having to go through the same problems as I did.
